

|  |   |
|--|---|
| Title:                            | History of Economic Thought   |
| Lecture hours:                    | 30 h  |
| Study period:(summer/winter) | Summer and Winter   |
| Number of credits:                | 5 ECTS  |
| Assessment methods:               | Activity in class discussions, written essays   |
| Language of instruction:          | English   |
| Prerequisites:                    | No necessary prerequisites  |
| Course content:                   | The course examines the development of economic thought from antiquity to the twentieth century. Students read and discuss a rich collection of writings from Aristotle and Aquinas to Marshall and Keynes, including such giants as Adam Smith and Karl Marx. The course pays great interdisciplinary attention to political, social, and cultural phenomena (governmental involvement in the economy, the understanding of economic value, labor, religion, liberty, and fairness). |
| Learning outcomes:                | Students acquire knowledge concerning the historical development of economic ideas. They can recognize, analyze, interpret, and explain economic phenomena in the Western civilization context.   |
| Name of lecturer:                 | Waldemar Hanasz PhD   |
| Email address:                    | waldemar.hanasz@ukw.edu.pl  |